

- An 8-pin/8-position plug or jack is commonly used to connect computers onto Ethernet-based local area networks (LAN).
- Two wiring schemes—T568A and T568B—are used to terminate the twisted-pair cable onto the connector interface.